Recommendation Letter for John Loh Jia Le

To Whom It May Concern,

This letter serves as a testimonial for John Loh Jia Le, who completed his internship with Hegen in the Strategy and Transformation department as a Project Management Intern from 1st September 2025 to 19th December 2025, under my supervision.

During his tenure, John consistently demonstrated a strong work ethic, intellectual curiosity, and a proactive approach to tasks. He quickly adapted to the organisation's operation and workflow, and consistently exceeded expectations in his project delivery, communication skills, and workplace professionalism.

John contributed to a wide range of initiatives across different departments, supporting digital projects, operational improvements and cross-functional activities. His responsibilities include research, content preparation, stakeholder coordination, event support, and assisting with the planning and execution of company-wide initiatives.

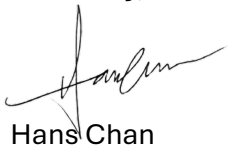

John consistently demonstrated initiative, adaptability, and an eagerness to take on responsibilities beyond the typical scope of an intern. He approached challenges with analytical thinking and curiosity, and showed strong emotional intelligence when working with both internal and external stakeholders.

Throughout his internship, John showed notable growth in confidence, resilience, and strategic thinking. He actively sought feedback, refined his skills, and took constructive criticism as an opportunity to improve, showing maturity beyond his experience level.

In summary, John Loh has been an outstanding intern whose contributions have made a tangible impact on our projects. I am confident that he will continue to excel in any professional environment he chooses to be a part of, and I wholeheartedly recommend him for future opportunities.

If you need any additional information, please feel free to reach out to me.

Sincerely,

Hans Chan
